HEY KIDS, TIME TO FIND A FROG AND GET IT TRAINED

It's time once again for the Annual Frog Jumping Contest sponsored by the Bethel Area Health Center. The contest will take place on Mollycokett Day, Saturday, July 16, at 2 p.m. on the lawn of the Moses House. Children of all ages and frogs of all shapes and sizes are invited to enter. There is a small entry fee.

Cash prizes will be awarded for the frogs that jump the longest distance in three consecutive jumps.

W'stock selectmen set to begin interviewing for town manager post

The Woodstock Board of Selectmen expects to begin interviewing candidates for the position of town manager within the next two weeks.

The position became vacant in March, when the selectmen voted unanimously not to renew the contract of Kathleen Mercereau, the town's first town manager. She had held the job for one year.

Dewey Thayer, of Mason Township, formerly a town manager in St. Georges, has filed in since April. But he has no interest in coming out of retirement and taking on the Woodstock job on a permanent basis.

First Selectman George Hooper said the town had received 14 applications for the position and that from these the selectmen have selected three candidates to interview.

Mr. Hooper said that the selectmen hope to have the new town manager begin work on Aug. 1. Mr. Thayer has agreed to stay on until then and to come in for two weeks when the new manager starts, Mr. Hooper said.

"The selectmen are all very pleased with the quality of the applicants," Mr. Hooper said. "In fact, we agreed unanimously on the three that we want to interview."

The salary for the town manager position is currently $18,000 to $18,500, with a six-month review.

Mr. Hooper expressed confidence that the selectmen would find a qualified candidate willing to take the position at that salary. "I'm going to call the [interviewees] and tell them the salary before they come in for the interview," he said, "but I really don't think that the salary is out of line for a town our size."

Andover, Newry served by new ambulance group

Northern Oxford Regional Ambulance Service (NORAS) last Friday became the official ambulance service provider for 11 area towns, including Andover and Newry.

NORAS is a cooperative service set up by towns formerly served by Keegan Ambulance Service, which filed for bankruptcy in April. The new service will do business under the name of Med-Care.

A board of directors drawn from the towns served by NORAS will govern its operations. Reflecting the rapidly increasing cost of medical services, NORAS' charges are considerably higher than those charged by Keegan. The basic town subsidies for NORAS are now calculated at the rate of $4.75 per capita for six months of service, and users will be charged a base fee of $145 plus $6 per loaded mile for each ambulance run. Under Keegan, the assessment to the towns had been figured on the basis of $3.15 per capita for a 12-month period.

Even at the higher subsidy and fee rates, NORAS is expected to operate at a deficit initially. Director Bill Gates said The NORAS board will recalculate the rates later, when it has more actual cost experience to go by.

According to Newry Selectman Bill Wight, that town's representative on the NORAS board, users can expect to receive the same high level of care they received from Keegan. Med-Care's staff is made up primarily of former Keegan employees, he said, and NORAS has negotiated to purchase much of Keegan's equipment.

Director Gates, who was Keegan's branch manager for this area, said Med-Care will also continue to provide advanced life support services.

The emergency ambulance-service telephone number used by Keegan's 364-3884 will also remain the same, Mr. Gates said.

Med-Care currently has three ambulances, he said, and is looking to purchase a fourth. New staff additions are also planned.

Local representatives to the NORAS board expressed optimism about this new attempt at regional cooperation, but they don't expect it to be without problems. "The board will be meeting at least once a month during the early stages," Mr. Wight, in order to fine tune the arrangement.

Andover Board Member and Selectman Laura Hutchins said: "I'm sure we're going to come up against some stumbling blocks; it's still a learning process."

No objections raised to Woodstock subdivisions

Two proposed subdivisions in Woodstock drew no opposition at public hearings held last Wednesday.

Approximately a dozen people turned out for hearings on the Summit Hill and Meadowlark subdivisions, but no one raised objections to either. Both are now expected to be approved by the Planning Board in the near future.

The Summit Hill Subdivision, being developed by Gordon Brown, is located on approximately 15 acres across Route 26 from the town ballfields. The subdivision consists of 13 lots, most slightly over one acre in size.

Most of the lots will have a view across the ballfields to Lake Christopher, but because they will be set back from the highway, the houses built on the lots will not be readily visible from the road.

The Meadowlark Subdivision, located on the former Davis Farm off the Gore Road, is being developed by George and Robert Fraser.

The 42-acre parcel is being divided into six lots, most are of approximately five acres; two are approximately nine acres. Deed covenants will prohibit the further subdivision of all but the two larger lots.

The developers of both parcels declined to speculate as to what the price would be for lots in the new subdivisions.

LITTLE CAREY ANNE BOELSMA is the latest local baby to be born at home rather than in a hospital. The parents are Jeanne and Andy Boelsma, of the Bog Road, Gilead. Their older daughters, Katrina and Mariah (above), were present at the 3 a.m. birth, as was neighbor Kate Slattery, who is looking forward to having her own home birth later this month.

More and more local women opting to give birth at home

While the trend is not likely to put hospitals and birthing centers out of business, a growing number of women are deciding to have their babies in the comfort of their own homes.

Last Monday, just past midnight, when Jeanne Boelsma felt the birth process beginning three weeks ahead of schedule, she didn't ask husband Andy to rush her to the hospital. Instead, she called Kathy Parker, a nurse in Locke Mills, and Pixie Williams, a doctor in South Woodstock, and asked them to rush over to the Bog Road, in Gilead. They arrived quickly, and two hours after she had notified them, she was holding her newborn daughter, Carey Anne.

For Jeanne, it was her second home birth. Her first was with Katrina—the Boelsma's second child. Their first child, Mariah, was born in a hospital, because a cesarean delivery was called for.

Having experienced both deliveries, in a hospital and at home, Jeanne says she prefers the latter. "I'm not a person who's comfortable in hospitals. I don't think births are a medical event. So you don't need all the technology of a hospital."

Watching Jeanne give birth was Bog Road neighbor Kate Slattery. "It was exciting," she said afterward.

Exciting, and also informative. Because Kate, who is expecting a baby around July 29, is also planning to give birth at home. Like Jeanne, she has already had one child in a hospital, also by caesarian. This one she wants at home. "I just feel I'm more relaxed at home," she says. She adds, "At the hospital, it's a place of illness."

Further down the Bog Road, Carol Duplessis is getting ready for her third home birth experience, later this summer.

Dr. Pixie Williams—familiar to local couples because of the years she spent as the doctor-in-residence at the Bethel Area Health Center—says the numbers of home births she is assisting at is increasing. From "five or so a year" a few years ago, she is now doing 10 or so a year, she says. This is out of a total of 50 births a year on her schedule.

In Maine, she says, only 1 percent of all births are at home. In comparison, she notes, in the Netherlands 35 percent of all births are at home.

She thinks there are probably many more women in Maine who would have their babies at home if there were more professionals to assist in home births. "I think one reason you don't have more home births is access—a lot of people just can't find someone."

One disincentive, she says, is that at least 90 percent of doctors believe that babies should be born only in hospitals, thus finding a doctor to assist or supervise in a home birth is not easy.

If a woman wants to use a midwife in Maine, it is also not easy to find one. Maine regulations license Certified Nurse Midwives, but the regulations stipulate that these professionals must be supervised by a physician and they must practice only in hospitals and birthing centers.

Midwives who actually do home births are simply called "lay midwives." They are not licensed by the state, though many have licenses as midwives in other states, or have taken midwife courses in other states.

Two of the so-called "lay midwives" that local women turn to are Phyllis Buchanan, of West Paris, and Karen Zornifer, of Poland—the former attended midwifery school out of state, while the latter is a licensed practical nurse.

They assisted Robin and Doug Zinck, of Bethel, in the birth of their three sons. "They're two wonderful people," says Robin. "They're very supportive and calming individuals. [and] if a complication were to occur, they're prepared."

Pixie says she has never experienced a complication with any home birth. "The ones I've done have been incredibly satisfying, and very smooth births. I've never had anyone I've had to transfer to the hospital."

One reason for the absence of difficult deliveries is the requirement on the part of Pixie and the lay midwives that the pregnant women they deal with be in good physical and emotional condition. The usual requirements for accepting a candidate for home childbirth include: she have no major medical problems, she be in excellent health, she have no history of problem pregnancies, she not smoke.

Summer school starts; student enrollment up

Summer courses are in full swing at Telstar High School and SAD #44 Adult and Community Education.

According to Carol Nielsen, director of the Telstar Evening Summer School, enrollment in summer classes has increased significantly over last year, with 48 students enrolled in five classes. This year is the first time summer school has been offered in the evening, which allows students to have summer employment and also to earn credits in school.

Courses in the summer school are English, social studies, algebra, typing and driver education. All courses except driver education began June 28 and will end Aug. 4. Driver education will begin on July 5. It is still possible to enroll in typing or driver education by calling the SAD #44 Adult Education Office, 824-2780, after 5 p.m., or Telstar High School, 824-2136, during the day.

Enrollment in SAD #44 Adult and Community Education courses is excellent, according to Director Cathy Newell, with a total of 72 participants to date. Introduction to computers was expanded to two sections of 12 each. Bird carving and woodworking are both filled and refresher math and the adult learning center, which offers brush-up work in reading, writing and math, both have new students and good enrollments. Any adult in the area who is in need of GED pre-testing, preparation or testing this summer, should contact the SAD #44 program at 824-2780 to arrange for an appointment.

Pixie Williams, who had both of her children at home, also requires that the women she works with have a phone at home.

Pixie says the women who choose to give birth at home tend to be somewhat out of the ordinary. "The people I have who are going to have babies at home are very well informed [about pregnancies and deliveries]," she says. "They're people that feel that birth is a very natural process and a family thing... and they want to avoid the hospital experience."

Many of those who opt for home birth,

Bethel Inn marks 75th anniversary

As The Bethel Inn observes its 75th anniversary, next Tuesday, it is fitting to remember two of the men who saw the need for such an inn and went ahead to fill that need.

"This inn stands as a visible expression of appreciation of an unusual physician and of gratitude for the inspiring personality shown in the work of John George Gehring, M.D."

These words of recognition are cast upon a bronze plaque, fashioned by Tiffany of New York, set in the lobby of The Bethel Inn.

Representing the concept and initiative of Dr. Gehring, the inn opened its doors to the public on July 12, 1913. Seventy-five years later, this grand hotel thrives as a classic New England resort.

Retaining much of the gilded elegance of yesteryear, The Bethel Inn is a survivor from the days when guests arrived by train, with steamer trunks in tow, to spend "the season" in the fresh Maine mountain air. As early as opening day, the inn has been unique and rich in history. Construction of the hotel itself was the result of a corporate venture between five of Dr. Gehring's patients, although for much of the inn's history (until 1955), William Bingham II was the sole owner.

It is with the good doctor and his patient Mr. Bingham that the colorful history of The Bethel Inn began—as well as a remarkable and generous commitment to the advancement of education and medicine stretching from Bethel to Boston—and beyond.

Dr. John George Gehring was born in Cleveland, Ohio, July 4, 1857. He took his medical degree at Western Reserve University in 1885 and practiced surgery in Cleveland until his health failed him and he suffered a nervous breakdown. Needing rest he moved to Bethel in early 1887, where his friends, Mr. and Mrs. George Farnsworth, lived. Within a year Mr. Farnsworth died. Dr. Gehring, age 30 and a bachelor, married the widow Mrs. Gehring herself had a powerful impact on the advancement of Gould Academy, where she was a trustee.

For several years Dr. Gehring did not practice medicine, but he did study with Portland physician Frederick H. Gerish, who practiced the treatment of nervous disorders with hypnosis, and French psychiatrist Dr. H. Bernheim, a pioneer in psychotherapy.

In 1888 the doctor resumed practice in Bethel, offering therapy for neurotic individuals. His patients were mostly professional men and women of high intelligence. There were writers, lawyers, corporate executives and many doctors. A large number—understandably—came from Cleveland, including William Upson and William Bingham.

Treatment included a stay at the Gehrings' spacious home. There the patients would chop wood, weed gardens, feed chickens and walk in the woods. Everyone would dress for dinner in the evening, patients and guests alike. These evening meals were quite the social event and considered stimulating therapy. Mrs. Gehring presided over the gatherings as a squad of servants served the several courses. Conversation would range from politics and religion to art and music. The talk was described as being "as brilliant as any in the best salons of Europe."

In time, Bethel became an intellectual center and was referred to as "The Harvard of the North," for the most brilliant men and women of the nation were going there for new life.

Dr. Gehring did not limit his dedication to medicine to just Bethel and his patients. He was instrumental as a guiding and motivating force in establishing new

A note from the publisher

Despite the lip service we pay to George Washington for being honest and telling his father he cut down the cherry tree, in reality many of us prefer to be kept in the dark when it comes to the truth.

Or, at the very least, we don't want to see embarrassing truths being spread about.

Nothing can get a reporter or columnist in hot water quicker than telling the truth. And that applies to writers in small town weeklies just as much as it does to writers in the "Washington Post" or the "New York Times."

Fourth-grader Alex Gilles discovered the danger of being honest a couple of weeks ago when she wrote in her column "Crescent Park Weekly" that on the last day of class she and her classmates were "mainly just killing time."

It was not an indictment of the educational system, but merely a statement of fact. Nevertheless, it raised hackles among some parents and among some school board members and led some educators to get defensive. Possibly those who reacted to the statement have forgotten that they also did little on the last day of class except kill time.

Other recent recitations of facts in The Citizen have also drawn the ire of some people. There were some disturbed reactions to our story about apparent public assistance anomalies in Auburn, and there were some grumblings when we reported on the slowdown in the condominium market. And some people did not like to see the report on the state fire marshal sending notices of violations to inns in town.

The objections to these stories and columns are not that they were inaccurate, but rather that these particular facts should not be reported. The facts are like family secrets, this argument goes, and should not be shared with the community.

Obviously, I and The Citizen staff do not agree with that point of view. As journalists we feel that situations that affect the community should be reported on—and commented on, if appropriate.

The difference between a private matter and a public matter is often hazy, but let's try an example: If the newspaper reports that a local resident paid $10,000 for a new car, that is making public a private transaction. On the other hand, if the newspaper reports that a local resident has failed to pay $10,000 in taxes owed, that's making public a situation that affects the public.

In general, anything that concerns public policy, public monies, the local economy, local government or local schools, should be reported in the local press. Since a newspaper's resources are limited, however, not everything that should be reported is reported. That's when the decisions of reporters and editors become apparent as they choose what news to report and what news to set aside.

Here at The Citizen, we regularly choose to disregard items that affect only one or two or a few people—such as traf-

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

For a number of years, I have placed a 13-star flag on the grave of one of my ancestors, James Mills, in a cemetery in Bethel. I have done this to commemorate his role as, in the words of his epitaph, "a soldier of the revolution."

In the beginning, I was able to replace the flag with a new one each year; in recent years the flag has rarely survived the summer. This year less than a month had passed before someone had stolen it.

There is something highly offensive about such desecration: one more symptom, perhaps, of the growing lack of respect and civility toward things once held sacred in our society. James Mills and his descendants have fought in all this country's wars from the Revolution to Viet Nam, presumably to make the country safe for us all. I am angered most because the thieves probably see nothing wrong about stealing from graves. I will continue placing flags at the grave in the, no doubt futile, hope that they will be left to wave there.

Sen. Cohen praises Supreme Court decision on independent counsels

Senator Bill Cohen (R-Maine), praised last week's 7-1 decision by the U.S. Supreme Court upholding the constitutionality of the independent counsel, which he was instrumental in writing. "Today's decision is a resounding statement that conflicts of interest in sensitive investigations will not be tolerated. The public can now be confident that suspected criminal wrongdoing in the Executive Branch will get a full hearing and not be swept under the rug at the Justice Department," he said.

The independent counsel law, originally enacted in the wake of the Watergate scandal, requires the appointment of an independent prosecutor in cases of alleged high-level wrongdoing within an administration. It is intended to eliminate the conflicts of interest inherent when an administration is called on to investigate itself.

As a then-member of the U.S. House of Representatives, Mr. Cohen was instrumental in the writing of the original independent counsel law of 1978 and has authored every subsequent revision.

"It's been a long and difficult battle, but now the need for this law has been resolved once and for all. Independent counsels do not usurp the President's power. Instead, they eliminate the need for the business of government to come to a grinding halt while clouds of suspicion hang over an administration. The Court's strong decision affirms that independent counsels are by far the best means of eliminating conflicts of interest," Sen. Cohen said.

Cohen is the ranking Republican on the Governmental Affairs Subcommittee on Oversight of Government Management, which produced the latest revision of the statute signed into law by President Reagan last year.

A number of independent counsel investigations are ongoing. They include those that have led to the indictments of Oliver North, John Pandexter, Albert Hakim and Richard Secord in connection with the Iran-Contra affair, as well as probes that led to the convictions of former White House aides Michael Deaver and Lyn Nizkorger. Yet another independent counsel is looking into the actions of Attorney General Edwin Meese III in connection with the Wedtech case.

"Since 1978, when this law was first written, Congress has revised it several times to make sure that it met constitutional muster," Sen. Cohen said. "Today's decision shows the wisdom of those changes. Particularly important was our 1982 amendment that made constitutionally sound the standard Presidents must use if they choose to remove an independent counsel."

Sen. Cohen noted that the Supreme Court decision, written by Chief Justice William Rehnquist, upheld every aspect of the independent counsel law.

values, so incensed the authorities that they came to the office, dragged off the editor to Korean CIA headquarters and beat him severely. "He didn't beat—simply threw me out of the country."

The lesson to be learned from being a journalist is that telling the truth often costs a price. Each journalist must decide for himself or herself whether or not the story is worth the price.

News from the Bethel Recreation Board

Thundering bats and spectacular snags of sizzling grounders gave the Bethel Blues their first victory of the season last week. According to Coach Carroll Murphy, the power hitting of Clint Myers and Scott Mason set the theme for the game as 19 runners crossed the plate for the Blues. Grayson Wakefield had the hottest bat of the night driving in several runs. His stand-up double into center field thrilled even the opposing team fans.

Fret Harvey's excellent catch of a fly ball in deep left field and Joe Collingwood's single-handed double play on third base took the momentum out of two Bryant Pond rallies to give the Blues a 19-13 win over the Bryant Pond A's.

The threat of a storm stopped the Greens game at Rumford Point after four innings of play as the wind picked up, sending mini-tornadoes up the infield. Matt Leighton was able to get in a home run, however, and Coach Dakin said that both Jeff Angevine and James Haines played an excellent game. The Greens still remain undefeated after a 15-10 win over Rumford Point.

Baseball fans witnessed a peak performance at the Reds game with West Paris on Tuesday night. Hit after hit from both teams kept the crowd cheering as West Paris took the close game by two points in a 17-15 win. Coach Fiske noted that Ian Paquette played very defensively and that the team as a whole were beginning to connect with the ball, which together is developing into some good runs for the team.

In spite of the Red Sox' two losses last week, it hasn't dampened their spirit or slowed them down. West Paris had a 2-1 win over the Sox, while Adam Newell demonstrated great pitching ability for two innings of the game and Travis York getting them right in there for the last four innings.

It was rained-out night at Rumford Point again after four innings of play. Rumford Point picked up a 17-9 win over the Red Sox, but not before Adam Hart and Travis York got their triples.

Four home runs were batted in by the Braves at Andover last week. Josh Otten and Tyrel Bartholomew each had a home run, and Adam Taylor had two. Adam Taylor pitched all six innings and gave up two runs on no hits. He walked nine and struck out 13. He also got three hits medical projects in Maine, Boston and New York with the aid of his stepson Dr. Farnsworth, his wife, and his friend and partner, William Bingham.

William Bingham II was born on July 21, 1879. As a boy of 17 he went to St. Paul's School in New Hampshire as an 11th-grader. That year, 1896/97, was the last of his formal schooling, for a combination of unhappiness from the loss of his mother and older brother, a bout with typhoid fever and inherently lonely nature brought on a long period of reduced strength and something which might be called a nervous breakdown.

Hearing of Dr. Gehring's work in Bethel, he appeared here in 1911 at the age of 32. Finding Bethel and the Gehring clinic—and especially the Gehrings themselves—congenial, he bought a house and spent his summers in Bethel for the rest of his life.

A recluse by choice, he led a lonely, shy, withdrawn life, but he could be thoughtful, pleasant and warm. Bingham had, according to all accounts, an extraordinary memory and a clear logical mind, and he functioned efficiently in the development of his large charities. He had a compelling desire to be helpful and considerable means with which to do it.

William Bingham II was the "financial angel" for the early development of the New England Medical Center Hospital, a generous contributor to the support and development of Gould Academy, one of the founding fathers of The Bethel Inn and a substantial contributor to hospitals in Portland, Bangor, Lewiston and the Neurological Institute of New York.

Dr. Samuel Proger, of the New England Medical Center, best summed up Mr. Bingham's character: "He had a mind that was clear and often embarrassingly logical. His questions were penetrating and the answers had to be rational and to the point. His remarkable qualities stand out clearly and strikingly: a concern for human welfare; a special concern for sick people; a gentleness of spirit, a bigness of heart and firmness of conviction, an abiding goodness and warmth, a high integrity, an absolute honesty, an amazing memory, a keen sense of humor, and, to be sure, certain superficial peculiarities. He was as spontaneous and thoughtfully selective in his giving as he was restrained almost monastic, in his living. He was extraordinary in every sense of the word."

Information in this article was excerpted from "An Unusual Mix of History" by Frank Vogt, "Doctor and Teacher, Hospital Chief" by Herbert Black, "The Gould Academy Story" by Francis Parkman.

Bingham visited Gould the year before he died

Edmund J. Vachon, Headmaster Emeritus of Gould Academy, has a more recent impression of Mr. Bingham. Having heard so much about the seldom-seen man through stories of his philanthropies to Gould, Mr. Vachon was struck by the fact that he had been on the Gould campus only three times in the 20th century.

As part of the 1984 commencement exercises a talented Bethel student had painted a stagelike commencement scene. Mr. Vachon, certain that the painting would attract Mr. Bingham to the only building on campus to bear his name, invited him to come see it.

"At the appointed time on a June day, when the campus was devoid of students and faculty," Mr. Vachon recalled, "the chauffeured black car drove up to the front entrance of the Gymnasium."

"Mr. Bingham, accompanied by his nurse, stepped inside and stood silently admiring the scenery of the big third stage. After several minutes he interrupted his visit by saying, 'Wonderful,' extended his right hand, adding, 'Goodbye and thank-you,' and departed. It was a timely event, as he died the following winter."

A study in contrasts, the highly visible doctor and the all-but-invisible philanthropist. In a curious way the one complemented the other.

in four at-bats. Mike Rackliffe had an excellent game getting two hits in two at-bats, and scored two runs. Tyrel Bartholomew was perfect at the plate, with four hits in four at-bats and scored four runs. Great teamwork netted the Braves a 2-2 win.

Coach Remington said, "I was real pleased with the team's performance. The practice and hard work by all the players really seems to be paying off. Although Andover has had a tough time of it this season, I do see them improving as a team. The one thing I did notice was that no matter what was happening, all of the kids seemed to be having fun and kept real good attitudes."

Last Wednesday night Bryant Pond was at the Braves home field where players and fans witnessed another home run by Tyrel Bartholomew, bringing his season total to four in 10 games. Tim Remington pitched six innings, giving up one run on two hits, striking out 13 and having no walks. He also got two base hits in three at-bats. It was another 7-1 win for the Braves.

Bryant Pond's only run came in the first inning when the lead-off batter, Wing, had a single and Gilson collected a double to drive in the run. After the first inning Tim Remington settled down and did not give up another hit the rest of the game.

Coaches comments: The Braves record is now 10-0. Through 10 games the Braves have scored a total of 107 runs while giving up only 36 runs.

says Pixie, are progressive, counter-culture, back-to-the-land types. All are comfortable with their bodies and with natural processes.

Probably most unique among the women who have their children at home, says Pixie, is their sense that they're doing it themselves. "People that have home birth take responsibility for the birth."

Not only does the woman look at the home birth more from the point of view of an actor, but the physician—according to Dr. Williams—looks on a home birth more from the point of view of an observer.

"You say, 'I attended the birth,'" Pixie advises, "not 'I delivered your baby.'" Home births not only put more of the focus on the woman and less on the doctor, they also put more focus on the family. Whereas in a hospital family members need permission to be present, at home births their presence is almost expected. When Robin and Doug had their youngest, Kevin, older brothers Danny and Brian were in attendance.

"They liked it," said Doug. "It's something special." Older daughters Mariah and Katrina, as well as their dad, Andy, were present for the birth of Carey Anne Boelsma last week. And expectant mother Kate Slatery says, "I want our older child to be there [at the birth]."

Those families who have had babies at home swear by it. Robin Zinchuk recalls, "It was a wonderful experience."

And husband Doug agrees: "It's a good experience. I'd tell anyone to do it if they're in good shape."

Carol Duplessis, who has had two children at home and is expecting her third in August, says, "I don't see the need of going someplace else when you can have them at home."

She is adamantly against using a hospital for childbirth. "I don't believe in the hospital. It's not necessary."

Doug Zinchuk believes a hospital can actually be dangerous to the birthing process. "There's so many germs floating around, and if you don't have insurance, you're talking a lot of money."

Dr. Williams says there are pluses and minuses to both settings. She agrees that there are more germs floating around in a hospital than in an average home. Also, at home there are not a lot of regulations to comply with, and there are not a lot of strangers around.

On the other hand, she points out, if there's a problem with a birth—or likely to be a problem, a hospital is a good place to be.

However, says Pixie, "The best thing you can do in terms of having a good outcome in the delivery is having the woman feel comfortable and safe." And for a growing number of local women, this means having their babies at home.

As Robin Zinchuk says, "I think it's the only way to go."

Dull and dreary this morning as I sit down to write but guess we can't complain as we still need some rain to soak into the ground. What rain we have had has made the plants perk up quite a lot.

That is, all except the heavy peony blossoms which got beaten down by the rain and haven't been able to get their lovely blossoms up again. I had planned to take a picture of them but didn't get it done the day I should have. Wanted to wait and see if they wouldn't open some more before I took a picture and see what happened. Just my luck!

Russell's roses that he planted this year are beginning to blossom and what a lovely color they are! Lots of buds to open but a few of the blossoms have opened up fully and are so pretty. Took a picture of the bush that had a couple of full blooms on it last night so will have that and hopefully get a picture of the other plants when the blossoms are opened up.

Just had to take a picture of his peas out back that are a flower garden in themselves at this time. They are so full of blossoms that it is a bed of white flowers there. Just hope every one gets a pod for peas to grow in and produce well. Some of the garden doesn't look as good as last year and that's not so good. Last year was a bumper crop of just about everything and we sure put up a lot. Will just have to wait and see how things go this year.

Not too much happening this week so far but Peggy did take Russell for his usual blood test on Monday morning and then went to Auburn to pick strawberries at Farmer Whitman's. Called on her daughter and husband, the Whites, in Auburn.

Peggy is busy taking a class on computers at Oxford Hills High School. She goes three days a week for a couple of hours. She said it is interesting and a lot to learn about computers. As long as she enjoys it, that is what counts.

Last Saturday, Michael, Wynona, Courtney and Karium came and left their goldfish with me while they took a trip this week into New York State. They had hired a motor home from Call of the Wild and were off for a new adventure. I haven't heard from them but hope all has gone well and they have had a good time. Expect them back tomorrow or Saturday. Something new and different so it should be fun and help get the family together for the week. No TV to watch so attention for the girls was the item for the week. Hope all is well.

Peggy took Russell to Bethel Tuesday afternoon for business reasons. Didn't accomplish what he had hoped but that is not new.

Forgot to say that we went to Locke Mills Saturday night to the dance. Had a good time and saw folks I haven't seen for some time. Was so glad to see Roger and Louise Twitchell, as I have seen them for years. Went to school with them so it was a pleasure to have a chance to talk with them some.

I haven't been up to doing as much this week, as I have been having trouble with good old fibrosis. Haven't had a bad attack for some time so it seems to be making up for it this week. That's the way things work sometimes. Walk a mile each day that I can but haven't done it so much this week. However, it has been interesting walking the road and seeing what was there. There was a bolt of the tar, just on the edge of was there for some time. I had there to see how long it would disturb. When I went to the other day I saw that it was gone. I was amazed how long something will stay on the road without being soiled or touched. I have no idea why it took it or what happened to it. It didn't seem to be there so will find something else to watch for on my walks when my legs let again.

I have a lot of small African growing at this time and hope they be ready to blossom in a month. Didn't get them started as early as I should have but do have a variety count along. It is fun to leaf in dirt and, with care, we develop into several plants once showing green above the dirt. Some African violets in water, but I don't have any luck doing it that stick them in dirt to start them.

Called Mary to see if she had any Grandma meeting at West Paris past masters' night, with refreshments after the meeting.

However, she did tell me the Grandma meeting at West Paris past masters' night, with refreshments after the meeting.

SATURDAY'S STIFF BREEZES AND CHILLY WEATHER kept most swimmers and boaters away from the water, but the weather was ideal for a few hardy sailors. Here, a wet-suited enthusiast has taken Christopher to himself as he runs with the wind. Saturday and Sunday were a different story, however—the winds dropped off, the temperature rose, and the quiet of the lakes gave way to the roar of oversized outboards, the shrieks of children splashing in the chilly waters, and music and conversation from parties along the shore. Photo by Thomas Duggan.

NTL enters second week

NTL Institute's second week of summer programs in human resource development and group development is now in session.

After a first-week population of 135 participants and staff, this week has a smaller number in attendance, reflecting a very light schedule of programs starting in the holiday week. At the opening session, held at the Bethel Inn Conference Center on Tuesday afternoon, Bethel Chief of Police Eric Wight welcomed the new arrivals on behalf of the Town of Bethel and the NTL/Bethel Liaison Committee.

Three new programs started on Tuesday. These include the Workshop in Self-Differentiation, a second called The Effective Partnership: Women and Men Working Together, and a Tavistock professional development workshop for NTL members. A fourth group, the Program for Specialists in Organization Development, is now in its second week of meetings and concludes on Thursday.

Continuing all summer are the Sunrise Seminars, open to all interested persons in the Bethel area at no charge. These 45 minute presentations by staff members start at 7:30 a.m. in the "Inn Tent," a new structure on the lawn behind the NTL Conference House at the end of Broad Street.

The seminar topics, offered Wednesday through Saturday this week, reflect the interests and expertise of the current staff group. As always, the specific topics are available from the NTL office, 824-2151, at anytime on or after the opening day for the week's programs. Additionally, the list of topics is posted regularly in a number of locations around Bethel.

A BIG WIND—some said they thought it might have been a tornado—came up suddenly in Northwest Bethel last Tuesday night, and this is the result. Ernest Angevine, together with great-grandson Craig, looks at what is left of his machinery shed that the wind toppled over. The posts were sunk three feet into the ground. The shed was valued at $2,100 in the town's recent revaluation.

18-lot subdivision takes shape in Hanover

The Hanover Planning Board recently approved the first phase of the Hanover Estates subdivision.

The 18-lot subdivision off Rte. 2 is situated on 121 wooded acres. Each lot has five or more acres. Some lots have frontage on Rte. 2, while the rest will be served by three private roads, to be constructed.

The subdivision is conveniently located near lakes, ski areas, mountains and areas of employment. Protective covenants will assure owners, as well as area residents, that this will remain a well planned community, the developers said.

Sandra Gunther's Maine Mountain Realty has been selected as exclusive agent for the marketing of this subdivision.

CHOOSING A LOG HOME REP IS AS IMPORTANT AS CHOOSING A LOG HOME COMPANY.

Who's going to help you with site selection, custom design, pre-planning, cost comparison and financing? Who will be there when your kit arrives? Whose construction experience will you depend on? Sure, a good log home company is important. But a good log home rep is invaluable.

Here is an interesting quote from a Maine author:

Everything made by hand and/or long used fascinates me. So do all the people who make, buy, sell, photograph or write about these treasures. I have never seen an antique shop, secondhand bookstore, barn lot or attic where I did not feel at home. Gladys Hasty Carroll

Locke Mills

By LORRAINE MILLS

Russell (Rusty) Hughes of Rumford spent the past week with your correspondent, returning home Wednesday. His mother had to go to Boston with his six year old brother, James, who underwent a 14-hour operation at Children's Hospital to repair damage to a leg suffered in an accident when he was hit by an 18 wheeler four years ago. The leg was not growing properly. It has been a long time since I had taken care of a 22-month-old and I'd forgotten how busy they are. He was either sound asleep or going like 90. And eat!—my, could that child eat! Needless to say, he was an absolute joy and I turned him over to his mother with mixed feelings of regret and relief, that, at my age, I had been equal to the task. We visited him Thursday night and returned some of the things that got left behind and he seemed to have gotten right back into the swing of things, which was a relief because at first he didn't want to leave him. It must be terribly confusing to a child that age, who has never been left overnight, to all of a sudden have to spend 10 days somewhere else without his mother. I also took care of Linda Gibb's dog, Candy, for a few days, so we had quite a houseful. Rusty knew both "doggie" and "puppy" so Candy, who is a big shepherd, became "doggie" and my small mutt became "puppy" and all three had a ball.

We were sorry to hear of the death of Eveline Vatcher. I have enjoyed her column and will miss her. Our sincerest sympathy goes to the members of her family.
